MJR & Virtue Focus: Count Your Blessings - Life goes on for us day by day and on occasions it is helpful to think about our life's blessings. It is human nature to look at wealthy people and moan to ourselves: "Look what they have and I can't have that." We only must look at the TV to see the wars in various parts of the world and the poverty in countries where the children are starving, to see how lucky we are. When students go out camping, cooking over the open fire, sleeping in tents on the ground – at the end of their camp they are looking forward to mum's cooking, a shower, and the TV. When we are deprived of these things, we certainly miss them. We hear first-hand of reports of how the poor in so many parts of the world really suffer. Even though we think we have it tough, it is good to appreciate how lucky we are by comparison.
